HEREDITARY THEATRICAL FAMILIES

(All rights reserved)

BY JOHN MALCOLM BULLOCH

THESE tables, which now deal with ninety families, are a contribution to the history of heredity on the stage, and while they are necessarily incomplete owing to the great lack of data, they cover more ground than has been attempted hitherto. They are purposely confined to members of a family who have been on the stage, or who have taken to any of the other arts.

Acting is a peculiarly hereditary talent, so infectious, in fact, that actors' children take to it in spite of any discouragement that may be offered; and sometimes when the parents' advice has been taken in the first generation, as in the case of Macready's son, now General Sir Nevil Macready, who is a good amateur actor, it breaks out in the next generation, as in the case of the General's daughter. "I am sorry to say," writes a veteran comedian, "all my children who grew up were on the stage; some of them still are, occasionally, when they can get anything to do."

And yet, to have been brought up in the atmosphere and environment of the stage does not necessarily imply exceptional skill or aptitude as an actor, although it may start a family of actors of varying degrees of merit. On the other hand, men without any theatrical strain in their families have become famous actors. Thus Sir Herbert Tree's father was a man of business, Sir George Alexander's a merchant, Mr. Waller's a civil engineer, Sir Charles Wyndham's a doctor—and, by the way, none of these used his own patronymic on the stage. The father of Mr. Bourchier was an army officer; Mr. Arthur Collins's an architect, and many similar instances could be cited.

The oldest distinguished family is the Kembles, whose founder, Roger Kemble, produced a remarkable family, including Mrs. Siddons. The histrionic instinct must have been strengthened in them through their mother, who was an Irishwoman. Indeed, the ranks of our actors, as has frequently been pointed out, are very largely made up of people of Celtic or Jewish origin. To take a modern example, Sir Henry Irving himself, born at Keinton in Somerset, had a Cornish mother and his wife was Irish; the famous American family of Booth was Jewish; and the Comptons bear the fine Highland name of Mackenzie. The Kembles began acting probably about the year of the second Jacobite Rebellion, and were represented on the stage till November, 1907, in the male line, by the late Mr. Henry Kemble, and in the female line by the late Mr. Frank Kemble Cooper, whose daughters are the youngest generation on the stage with a Kemble strain.

The next place of honour must be allotted to Mrs. Kendal's family, the first known of whom is usually said to have been born in 1723. The family has always claimed that it came from Perthshire, and the name bears out the tradition, but as James Shafto Robertson was born at Ludlow and as Shafto is clearly English, I have suggested an earlier ancestor than that usually assigned. The Robertsons were long identified with the Lincoln circuit, and it has been suggested to me that General Sir William Robertson, who is a Lincolnshire man, may be connected with the acting family. I have taken a great deal of pains to investigate the early history of the family, notably through the data collected by the late Sir William Tindal Robertson and now in the possession of his son Mr. Tindal Robertson, of the Albany, but much yet remains to be cleared up, for they were often described as "Robinson." Thomas Gilliland so describes them in his Dramatic Mirror of 1808, and even some of the Lincoln parish registers call them "Robinson."

WHO'S WHO IN THE THEATRE

Actually the oldest family is that of the Pitts, who date back to 1720, Ann Pitt being a comic actress at Drury Lane for over half a century, and a great favourite with David Garrick. The Pitts are interesting owing to their connection with the Dibdins, and from the fact that Tom Dibdin, the great song-writer, was Ann Pitt's favourite grandson: But in point of acting triumphs they cannot compare with the Kembles and Kendals.

The tables, laboriously compiled and frequently revised, as obscure data have turned up, are indebted in some cases to other genealogists. Thus, the one dealing with the Blands (ancestors of the late Duke of Fife) and Glovers are chiefly compiled from Mr. J. F. Fuller's elaborate "Pedigree of the Family of Bland, late of Derriquin Castle, Co. Kerry" (1907). The Jay Table is founded on the articles by Mr. Ralph Thomas in Notes and Queries (10th s. vi, 441, 502). I am wholly indebted to Mr. Walter Copeland Jerrold for the table of the Jerrols, for he has long since constituted himself the family historian. I am also much indebted to Mr. T. McDonald Rendle, whose memories of theatrical personalia during the last fifty odd years is amazingly comprehensive. The tables of American acting families are based mainly on a series of articles in the Theatre, of New York. I have also to express my best thanks to Mr. John Parker, the Editor of this book, whose knowledge of players past and present is probably unique; he has supplied many details and suggested several of the tables, Mr. W. J. Lawrence, of Dublin, who possesses a minute knowledge of the nooks and crannies of old theatrical history has helped me generously. I regret that such a book as the present does not readily afford facilities for citing chapter and verse for the statements in the tables. Players themselves are untrustworthy genealogists. One old actor, for instance, traces his grandfather to a foreigner of the "seventeenth century"; which is absurd, as Euclid used to say.

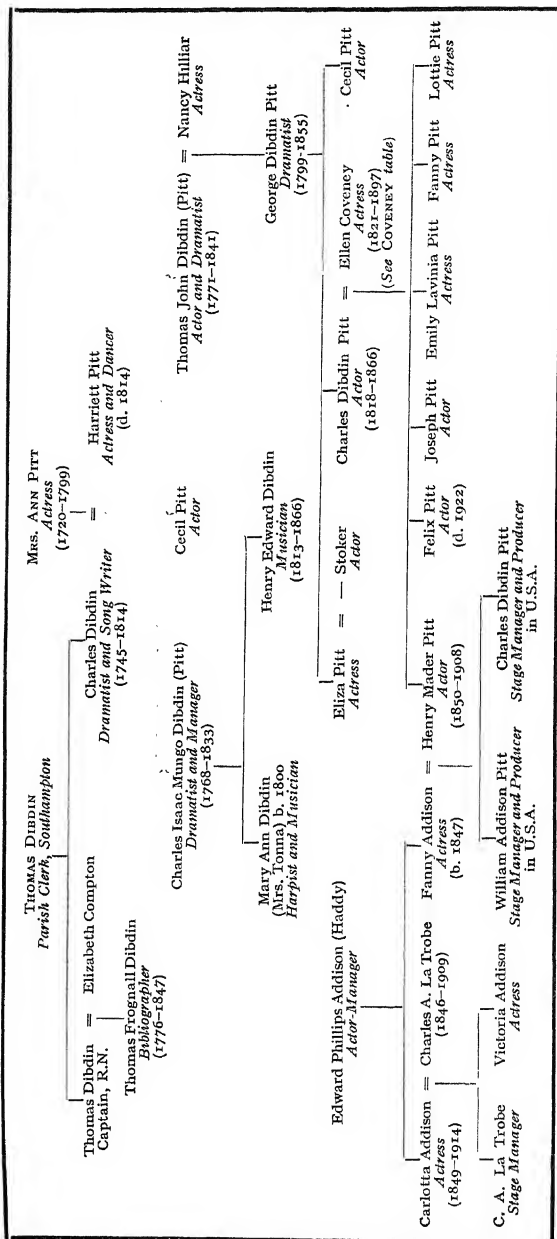

It may be added that these tables have been used at the Laboratory of Eugenics to illustrate the working of heredity, though I have not ventured to estimate the relative abilities of the players dealt with. For the purpose of the scientific Eugenist it would be necessary to show "degrees of ability." But that is impossible in the case of dead actors, because their art is not demonstrable in the same degree as painting or authorship; and in the case of living actors any attempt to discriminate would prove a very high explosive.

Theatrical biography is exceedingly difficult to trace because of the players' fundamental disinclination to deal in anything so concrete as facts and dates. In some cases the data are so tenuous that I have not ventured to give them. So criticism and correction of these tables are gladly courted: additions are warmly welcomed, for only by constant and to a large extent co-operative care can anything approaching accuracy be attained.

Charles Matthews, the elder, was the uncle of James Matthews Leigh (1808-60), artist and dramatist, who was the father of Henry Sambrooke Leigh (1837-83), author of "Carols of Cockayne." It is stated in "Who's Who" (1920) that Sir Charles was "the son of William and Elizabeth West and step-son of Charles James Matthews, the comedian, whose name he assumed by deed poll." But "Burke" calls him the son of Charles James Matthews.

LONG RUNS ON THE LONDON STAGE

BY JOHN PARKER

THE long "run," by which most plays are usually remembered by playgoers and others, is of comparatively modern growth. Prior to the year 1822, no play had ever obtained a run of 100 nights (matinées only date back some fifty years), and it was not until the advent of the comic drama entitled "Tom and Jerry," founded on some sketches of London Life by Pierce Egan, that any production achieved that distinction.

Of course, the restricted field was mainly responsible for the frequent change of attraction which was necessary, and the Patent Theatres, Drury Lane and Covent Garden, mainly relied on Shakespeare and the old dramatists. Between seasons, from July to October, the Haymarket, which was then permitted to be open, would rely chiefly on similar attractions.

The first production to obtain a run of over fifty nights, was the famous comic opera, "The Beggar's Opera," written by Gay and Linley, produced at Lincoln's Inn Fields Theatre in 1728, and which was performed sixty-two times successively (except for benefit performances). This record stood for nearly a century. Then, nearly two hundred years later, the opera was revived at the Lyric, Hammersmith, and achieved the remarkable run of 1,463 performances.

As has been stated, the first play to achieve the notoriety of being performed 100 successive nights was "Tom and Jerry." The first version of this piece was produced at the Olympic Theatre, on 12th November, 1821, under the title of the original book, "Life in London," and this version held its place in the bills until 5th January of the following year. But it was the version, written by W. T. Moncrieff, produced under the book's sub-title of "Tom and Jerry," at the Adelphi on 26th November, 1821, that first secured the honour of being performed 100 times. The piece was played continuously until 30th March, 1822. It was revived on 7th October, 1822, and again ran until 4th January, 1823, when it gave place to what might be termed a sequel, entitled "Green in France; or Tom and Jerry's Tour," which remained in the programme from 6th January until 22nd March, 1823.

The Olympic version was also revived (this time under the title of "Tom and Jerry") on 28th October, 1822, and ran until 4th January following.

So successful was the piece that imitators sprang up on all sides, and versions were performed at the Royalty, Surrey, Sadler's Wells, Coburg, and Astley's Theatres. Indeed, at one period, in 1822, no fewer than ten theatres, in and around London, were playing "Tom and Jerry." In later years, it even succeeded in penetrating the precincts of Drury Lane and Covent Garden.

The next play to secure a run of 100 nights was a nautical melodrama written by W. Bayle Bernard, entitled "Casco Bay," produced at the Olympic Theatre, on 3rd Dec., 1827, which was played 140 times, but, somehow or other, never seems to have been revived. The author was then but 20 years of age.

"Black Eyed Susan," by Douglas Jerrold, was the next play to create a furore, and the original version, produced at the Surrey Theatre on 8th June, 1829, was played no fewer than 150 nights. Its success was phenomenal, so much so, that it was secured for representation at Covent Garden, and the famous T. P. Cooke was engaged to play his original part there. As a matter of record, it may be stated that here, for the first time, we had the recently revived idea of playing a drama twice nightly, for Cooke used to play William at Covent Garden to the Susan of Ellen Tree (who subsequently became Mrs. Charles Kean), and then return to the Surrey to play the lover to the Susan of Miss Scott.

"Jonathan Bradford," another famous melodrama, also produced at the Surrey, on 12th June, 1833, the work of Edward Fitzball, was performed 161 times in succession, was revived several times, and held the stage for many years.

In 1843, with the passing of the Theatres Act, new plays became more numerous, and one of the earliest to attain the coveted 100 nights was a spectacular production at Astley's Amphitheatre, entitled "The War in China," produced on 27 May, 1844, and performed 114 times. Then came a dramatised version of Charles Dickens's "Martin Chuzzlewit," by Edward Stirling, produced at the Lyceum, 8th July, 1844, and performed 105 times. Then followed "The Island of Jewels," an extravaganza, at the Lyceum (26th December, 1849), with 111 performances; "The Court Beauties," a comedy, at the same theatre (9th June, 1851), 104 times; a revival of "King Charming," extravaganza, at the same theatre, on the same date, 109 times; "Uncle Tom's Cabin," a version of the famous work of Harriet Beecher-Stowe, at the Victoria (20 Sept., 1852), 111 times; "The Chase," an equestrian drama, at Astley's (16th June, 1853), 104 times; "The Battle of Waterloo," a revival at Astley's (18 June, 1853), 110 times; and "The Camp at Chobham," a farcical play, at the Adelphi (30th June, 1853), 143 times.

The first Shakespearean play to secure a run of 100 nights was Charles Kean's production of "King Henry VIII," at the Princess's, on 16th May, 1855. Played 100 times to the end of the season, 14th September, it opened the next season on 22nd October and ran another 50 nights. This record stood for many years, although an equestrian version of "Richard III," produced at Astley's, 2 Sept., 1856, was played 110 times.

The modern "long runs" may be said to have commenced with the production of Dion Boucicault's famous drama, "The Colleen Bawn," produced at the Adelphi, on 10th September, 1860, and played for 165 successive nights. Revived on 29th Apr., 1861, it was played 66 times; again revived on 23rd Sept., 1861, it ran a further 93 times, and still again revived on 23rd June, 1862, achieved a further 90 performances. It was, in addition, played simultaneously, at many other theatres. Then came "Peep o' Day," a clever drama by the erratic Edmund Falconer, produced at the Lyceum on 9th November, 1861, with Hermann Vezin in the leading part, and which was performed 346 times in succession.

Curiously enough, two days later, "Our American Cousin," by Tom Taylor, which was to give E. A. Sothern's Dundreary such undying fame, was produced at the Haymarket. Its first run reached only 36 performances, ending 21st Dec., 1861, but revived on 27th Jan., 1862, it ran uninterruptedly until 23rd Dec., 1862, or 314 successive performances.

Since that date over 1,250 pieces have passed the coveted "100th performance," and the list will be found attached. It has been a laborious compilation, but it may prove of some interest as a record.

The first play to secure a run of 500 successive performances was "Our Boys," and although surpassed by the number of performances of "Charley's Aunt," the famous old comedy held the time-record of four years and three months' continuous performances, for over forty years, when this and all other records were passed by Mr. Oscar Asche's production of "Chu-Chin-Chow."

No other play comes within measurable distance of the extraordinary run of this piece, which was performed 2,238 times.

Eight plays only have secured continuous "runs" of more than 1,000 performances: "Chu-Chin-Chow," 2,238 times; "Charley's Aunt," 1,466 times; "The Beggar's Opera," 1,463 times; "Our Boys," 1,362 times; "The Maid of the Mountains," 1,352 times; "A Little Bit of Fluff," 1,241 times; "A Chinese Honeymoon," 1,075 times; and "Romance," 1,046 times. During the period of the Great War alone, 1914-18, no fewer than four productions were able to record more than one thousand performances.

Next in point of run comes "Dorothy," with 931 performances, followed by "Paddy the Next Best Thing," 867 times; "The Better 'Ole," 811; "The Arcadians," 809; "The Boy," 801.

WHO'S WHO IN THE THEATRE

Twelve pieces only have secured a run of more than 700 performances: "The Private Secretary," 785; "The Merry Widow," 778; "San Toy," 768; "The Geisha," 760; "The Lilac Domino," 747; "Tons of Money," 737; "A Country Girl," 729; "Joy-Bells," 723; "Seven Days' Leave," 711; "Peg o' My Heart," 710; "Les Cloches de Corneville," 705; and "H.M.S. Pinafore," 700. It will be noted that eight of this number fall under the category of either comic opera or musical play, and four of them stand to the credit of the late Mr. George Edwardes, at Daly's Theatre. Farce ("Tons of Money" and "The Private Secretary"), melodrama ("Seven Days' Leave"), and comedy ("Peg o' My Heart") are the remaining pieces.

Seventeen pieces have more than 600 performances to their credit, and thirty have reached the 500 mark. For convenient reference, I append herewith the list of all plays which have secured a run of 500 continuous performances and upwards on the London Stage—

COMMAND PERFORMANCES

The first private Command Performance was given at Windsor Castle by direction of the late Queen Victoria, on 28 Dec., 1848. The play on that occasion was "The Merchant of Venice," and in the cast were included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kean, Mr. and Mrs. Keeley, Mr. Henry Howe, Mr. Leigh Murray, and Mr. Alfred Wigan. Thereafter, frequent performances were given until the lamented death of the Prince Consort in Dec., 1861. Benjamin Webster, Charles Kean, and Samuel Phelps were at various times responsible for the plays produced, and occasionally the pieces presented were played by practically "star" casts, drawn from the principal London theatres. From 1861 to 1881 no "Commands" were given, but appended is a complete list of the

KING GEORGE'S PENSION FUND FOR ACTORS AND ACTRESSES

The Great "Gala" performance, given at His Majesty's Theatre by the theatrical profession, on 27 June, 1911, in celebration of the Coronation of His Majesty the King, realised a net profit of £4,628. With the gracious assent of His Majesty, this sum was deposited to form the nucleus of a Pension Fund for aged Actors and Actresses.

In 1913 it was decided to give an annual performance, with an "all-star" cast, in aid of the fund, and the first performance given was at the St. James's Theatre, on 27 June, 1913, when the play performed was Dion Boucicault's old comedy, "London Assurance." The profit accruing from this performance (inclusive of donations) was £1,093 11s. 6d.

The 1914 performance was given at His Majesty's Theatre on 22 May, 1914, and the play chosen was "The Silver King," by Henry Herman and Henry Arthur Jones. The proceeds of this performance (inclusive of donations) amounted to £1,318 6s.

The 1915 performance was likewise given at His Majesty's Theatre, on 5 July, 1915, when Shakespeare's "King Henry VIII" was revived. The profit realised (inclusive of donations) was £714 7s.

The 1916 performance was given at the London Opera House on 23 June, 1916, when J. M. Barrie's play "The Admirable Crichton" was presented. The proceeds of the performance realised £1,848.

The 1917 performance was given at His Majesty's Theatre, on 14 Dec., 1917, when F. Anstey's comedy, "The Man from Blankley's," was revived.

The 1918 performance was also given at His Majesty's Theatre, on 17 Dec., 1918, when the second act of "Masks and Faces," scenes from "Macbeth," and Cecil Clay's "A Pantomime Rehearsal" were performed.

The proceeds of the performance realised £2,000.

There were no performances during 1919 and 1920.

The 1921 performance was given at the Palace Theatre, on 19 Dec., 1921, and the programme on this occasion was composed of "Trilby," adapted by Paul M. Potter from George Du Maurier's book of the same name, and Sir J. M. Barrie's "Shall We Join the Ladies?" (Act I).

The proceeds of the performance were approximately £2,000.

The next performance was given at His Majesty's Theatre, on 26th Feb., 1923, when "The Ballad Monger," "Half-an-Hour," and "Offenbach Follies," were given. The proceeds of the performance amounted to £1,030.

The 1924 performance was given at the Adelphi Theatre, on 2nd June, 1924, when Mr. George Pleydell's drama, "The Ware Case," was revived. The proceeds on this occasion amounted to £1,525.

The annuitants receive a pension of £100 each, and those at present in receipt of the pension are Louise Moodie, Emma Chambers, Alma Murray, Dolores Drummond, Jennie Lee, Cicely Richards, and E. M. Robson.

As a matter of interest, the "casts" of these "all-star" revivals are appended---

 The proscenium wing being almost invariably the lowest point to which a scene can be set, from that point to the back wall is the working part of the stage, and is a better measurement for stage-managers and carpenters to work from than from the curtain line; the space between curtain line and proscenium wing varying in nearly every theatre.

The whole of the dimensions given in this table were courteously supplied by the respective stage-managers, to whom we are greatly indebted for the information.

PRESS OPINIONS

A Selection from many excellent Press Opinions of previous issues—

THE TIMES says—

In "Who's Who in the Theatre" Mr. John Parker is carrying out the good work which David Erskine Baker began with his "Companion to the Playhouse" in 1764. Mr. Parker gives the more important facts in regard to several hundred players, dramatists, critics, Continental as well as English and American.

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH says—

The volume, a perfect storehouse of information regarding members of the theatrical profession, is quite remarkable for the fullness and the accuracy of the details furnished. From the standpoint of the critic it is a book of incalculable value.

The value of "Who's Who in the Theatre" to all interested in stage work of any description increases with every fresh edition. Mr. John Parker's compilation, in short, is no longer a luxury; it has become a positive necessity. The new edition bears ample testimony to his untiring industry. Taken altogether it would be difficult to exaggerate the value of the volume. To all interested in the theatre, and particularly to those whose business is concerned with theatrical events, past and present, the volume is simply invaluable. What it has cost Mr. John Parker, the compiler in patience, industry, and research none but he knows; the result is a work in regard to which the use of the word "monumental" can hardly be considered exaggerated. It is not alone the extent of ground which it covers that calls for commendation. Even more praiseworthy are the care and unremitting attention displayed in the pursuit of accuracy. To assert that it is without spot or blemish would be tantamount to declaring that Mr. Parker is more than human. But in his necessarily somewhat cursory examination of the long list of biographies the present writer has been unable to detect any slip of real importance.

THE DAILY MAIL says—

An invaluable work of reference. Contains not only condensed biographies of well-known actors, managers, critics, composers, and dramatists, but also an obituary which contains the names of nearly all the leading actors of the past.

"Who's Who in the Theatre" is not only a most complete biographical record of the stage, but is also a wonderful store of facts of incalculable value to everyone interested in theatres and in those who write for them, act in them, and manage them.

"Who's Who in the Theatre" is undoubtedly the best and most useful directory of the stage ever compiled.

THE MORNING POST says—

The book is an excellent piece of work and invaluable to those who have to do with the theatre. One can only congratulate Mr. John Parker, and trust that "Who's Who in the Theatre" will prove what it deserves to be—a hardy annual.

Since the appearance of its first edition, "Who's Who in the Theatre" has been recognised as a standard work in a region where trustworthy authorities are few. It is really indispensable to all who have to do with the stage, and concerns not the stage of our own land alone, but those foreign stages between which and our own there is such a constant commerce.

THE DAILY CHRONICLE says—

Altogether it is a most indispensable and timely volume of things theatrical.

Thanks to Mr. John Parker's indefatigable labours and excellent judgment, this indispensable record of the life of the contemporary stage has now developed into a work of reference that in itself helps to give a dignity to its subject. The book is a mine of information, and in its new and enlarged edition is indispensable to those interested in the stage.

THE DAILY NEWS says—

Playgoers cannot be too grateful for the latest "Who's Who in the Theatre" To all people who go to theatres or who read about theatres, as well as to those who earn a living by theatrical art, this book is indispensable.

THE DAILY EXPRESS says—

. one that every student of the stage will require on his bookshelves.

"Who's Who in the Theatre" fully deserves the praise bestowed on it.

Mr. John Parker, the editor, has brought this indispensable volume down to date. The biographies are remarkably full and complete, and the appendices are a mine of information.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC says—

The editor, Mr. John Parker, has rounded out his invaluable stage reference book to excellent purpose. In its new and revised form the volume is the best guide to stage biography available, and is full of details interesting to the playgoer.

THE DAILY SKETCH says—

To theatrical folk it is quite indispensable.

THE SPORTING LIFE says—

How many people, even those who find most use for them, realise the amount of labour and research that is necessary for the production of a complete book of reference? Precious few, I warrant. Yet it is impossible for the most thoughtless to glance through the latest issue of "Who's Who in the Theatre" without understanding how huge has been the task carried to a successful conclusion, how great the triumph of the editor, Mr. John Parker, and those who assisted him. Its pride is its completeness. It is the sort of book to appeal to anyone interested actively or passively in the theatre, its people, and its past.

Everybody connected directly or indirectly with the stage will give a most hearty welcome to "Who's Who in the Theatre," compiled and edited by John Parker. A most valuable book of reference, crowded with facts carefully collated, and admirably arranged, the latest edition of "Who's Who in the Theatre" more than maintains the high reputation gained by the preceding editions.

THE EVENING STANDARD says—

A new list of great convenience and completeness.

Mr. John Parker has just published a new edition of his invaluable theatrical guide, "Who's Who in the Theatre." It is quite the Bradshaw of the stage, and should be on every playgoer's shelf.

Though his previous editions of "Who's Who in the Theatre" were as remarkable for extent as for accuracy, Mr. John Parker has not been content to rest on his laurels. He has not only brought his swarms of facts up to date, but the volume contains much more than personal particulars. Such information as is given about West End theatres and plays must be a great source of comfort to even the most infallible memories.

THE WESTMINSTER GAZETTE says—

. a very comprehensive biographical dictionary. The new edition of "Who's Who in the Theatre" is better and bigger than its previous issues, and Mr. John Parker, the editor, is to be congratulated on the thoroughness and general accuracy of his work.

THE REFEREE says—

The most comprehensive record of the work of workers in the Theatrical World that has yet been seen. It is indeed a monumental compilation.

"Who's Who in the Theatre" is invaluable to all interested in the drama, from whichever side of the footlights one's interest is focused.

One thing is certain, that is, that if you have had that compendious compilation, "Who's Who in the Theatre," arranged and edited by Mr. John Parker, and published for some few years past by Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons, you miss it sorely if you don't follow it up and secure each successive volume. The new issue is more welcome than ever. It might, indeed, fittingly be described as a Monumental Memorial of Mummies.

THE ATHENAEUM says—

An elaborate guide to the stage of to-day, which should be very useful for reference. The details given in the section of Biography are particularly full.

THE OBSERVER says—

This attractive volume has made its appearance with all the signs of robust success. The biographical portion of the work has been extended, and in every way the publication is both interesting and useful.

The book has all the qualities necessary for a work of this character; it is wonderfully up to date, accurate, full and clearly arranged. Everyone of any importance in the theatre, on either side of the curtain, is included in the biographies; the foreign drama is not neglected, the tables of genealogy, compiled by that master of the science, Mr. J. M. Bulloch, are full of interest. Mr. Parker has done his work of editing the volume with immense care and skill, and the result is a book of reference which is indispensable to those who are concerned with the business of the stage.

THE STAGE says—

An admirably compiled and edited book, and the work reflects much credit on Mr. Parker.

THE ERA says—

A biographical record of the contemporary stage, unrivalled in its completeness an invaluable, nay, an indispensable, work of reference.

Is of inestimable value.

ENCORE says—

"Who's Who in the Theatre" is a biographical record of the contemporary stage and is a mine of information which none who are connected with the stage can afford to neglect or leave unbought. The compiler and editor, Mr. John Parker, has had a colossal task before him and he has succeeded in a manner surpassing all human expectation. All writers and talkers who wish to get a reputation for encyclopaedic knowledge in things of the stage would do well to start at page 1 and finish at the end of the book.

THE SPORTING TIMES says—

So much interest is taken by the public, playgoers or otherwise, that the new and revised edition of "Who's Who in the Theatre" is sure of a warm welcome. Mr. John Parker, who is responsible for the previous editions, has produced a most interesting book of reference which can only be described as a colossal work.

Admirably put together and up to date.

THE LIBRARIAN says—

With this edition "Who's Who in the Theatre" consolidates its position in the world of year-books of reference. We can say with the greatest truth that it deserves its position.

THE PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR says—

. almost indispensable to those interested in theatrical matters

THE WORLD says—

Undoubtedly the most complete work of its kind yet issued. All who are interested, whether professionally or otherwise, in the theatre to-day should possess a copy.

The book contains an enormous amount of information.

THE GRAPHIC says—

The best work of the kind ever attempted The most fascinating book of reference that is published.

Nothing but enthusiasm could have carried Mr. Parker to the point of producing "Who's Who in the Theatre"; no financial reward could recompense him for the immense trouble he has taken to make the present book as complete as it is. When all is said and done, his achievement is extraordinary, and it can be measured only by someone who has attempted a similar task.

This invaluable work of reference has eclipsed all its predecessors in completeness. Of all the books of reference, and there are many, none is better or more lovingly done than "Who's Who in the Theatre" compiled and edited by Mr. John Parker. It is almost incredible that one man could produce a book so encyclopaedic as this. No more comprehensive book about the theatre has been published here, or elsewhere. Unlike most books of reference, anybody interested in the theatre can sit down and read "Who's Who in the Theatre" with pleasure, especially in the matter of the biographies of actors, which are extraordinarily comprehensive and accurate.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS says—

..... an excellent book of reference. In olden days The Era, the well-known stage weekly, was called "The Actors' Bible." I wonder what the Profession will invent to immortalise Pitman's publication of Mr. John Parker's "Who's Who in the Theatre"? It is an admirable book, one of those I love to take off my shelves and to flit through with butterfly-wings. It tells tales of achievement; it recalls the tides of many careers; it saves from oblivion a multitude who in their day adorned the boards and have since, in well-earned rest, planted the cabbage of contentment.

THE SKETCH says—

All who are interested in things dramatic, whether as members of "the profession" themselves, or as playgoers, critics, business people, or what-not, will give a hearty welcome to the new and enlarged edition of "Who's Who in the Theatre," compiled and edited by Mr. John Parker. "Who's Who in the Theatre" is a thoroughly well arranged work of reference, and one which will be generally welcomed in its new edition. It contains a mine of information on matters theatrical. "Who's Who in the Theatre" is, in fact, a volume which contains information on practically every point in connection with the stage; and the Theatrical Calendar, which is one of its features, is a fascinating study.

THE LADY'S PICTORIAL says—

There should be a very large and cordial public who will be interested in the new edition of that invaluable reference book to the drama, "Who's Who in the Theatre," compiled and edited by John Parker. Altogether, the volume is an interesting and admirably planned work of reference.

..... it will be cognate to Debreit or Burke, and covering even wider ground in its own world than do those indispensable volumes.

THE ILLUSTRATED SPORTING AND DRAMATIC NEWS says—

After some ineffectual attempts in the past to found a successful dramatic "Who's Who," it looks as though the one now edited and compiled by Mr. John Parker has come to stay. It is undoubtedly the best of its kind yet seen.

THE SUNDAY TIMES says -

"Who's Who in the Theatre" makes a welcome reappearance. As in the past issues, the work is a mine of information in regard to the contemporary stage. It is a formidable "compilation of theatrical biographies." It includes particulars of the lives not only of prominent folk on the contemporary stage, but references to managers, dramatists and others whose work has been of value to the dramatic world of to-day. Mr. John Parker staggers one with his industry. His accuracy and care are comparable to those of a chartered accountant.

THE PEOPLE says—

The volume has grown with the passage of years, and has now attained to quite bulky proportions. It is, indeed, a work of much knowledge and labour, and could not be in safer hands than Mr. Parker's. Such a work has entailed vast research and endless patience, but the result adequately repays all the labour expended upon it. No student of the drama can afford to be without it. Not only is it a biographical dictionary of all the more notable personages connected with the stage, it contains many other features incidental thereto. It is, indeed, an invaluable work for all whose business or pleasure takes them into the dramatic world.

HORSE AND HOUND says—

That invaluable work of reference, "Who's Who in the Theatre," compiled and edited by Mr. John Parker, has just been issued, and will prove not only a luxury, but a necessity, to all who are interested in the stage. "Who's Who in the Theatre" is a monumental work of inestimable value, on the compilation of which Mr. Parker deserves the heartiest congratulations and the warmest thanks of all who are interested in the drama both of yesterday and to-day. All who are interested in matters theatrical—whether as critics, actors, historians, or mere playgoers—will hail with acclaim the new edition of "Who's Who in the Theatre."

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY HERALD says—

Easily the most engrossing book of the year is "Who's Who in the Theatre."

THE PERFORMER says—

Biographies of practically everyone connected with the theatrical profession are given in a most concise and comprehensive form. It is practically the only volume of its kind published, and forms an invaluable work of reference indispensable to anyone interested in any way in the Theatrical or Variety World.

THE CLARION says—

If anyone wants a good "Who's Who" of the theatre, let that one beg, borrow, steal—or buy, of course—the new "Who's Who in the Theatre." It is a colossal work, containing not only biographies of everyone connected with the theatre in England, but of all the Continental theatrical notabilities also.

THE SATURDAY REVIEW says—

Of all reference books necessary to members of a particular profession, the theatrical "Who's Who" is one of the most complete. Looking through these pages, one gets an almost oppressive sense of the skill, management, and industry that goes to the compiling of a book of this kind. In the theatrical "Who's Who" one can admire a difficult task well executed.

THE PLAY PICTORIAL says—

If you are keenly interested in things theatrical, you should possess yourself of "Who's Who in the Theatre," which is a biographical record of the contemporary stage, compiled and edited by Mr. John Parker. Taking it all in all, "Who's Who in the Theatre" holds its own with the great reference books of our generation. It is a credit to its Editor and to the firm of Sir Isaac Pitman, who have the enterprise to publish it.

THE MANCHESTER COURIER says—

In "Who's Who in the Theatre" we have a valuable record of the prominent persons in the theatrical world... the work is certain to meet with success, for it meets a decided want.

To all those who are connected with the stage, or who was, in any way, interested in the theatrical world, "Who's Who in the Theatre" will prove invaluable. It is a veritable mine of useful information, clearly set forth and readily accessible, which no one intimately acquainted with the drama can afford to be without.

THE MANCHESTER GUARDIAN says—

"Who's Who in the Theatre" gives concise but adequate biographies of actors, managers, dramatists, and critics on the Continent and in America, as well as in this country.

Once again, a very handy book of reference.

THE SUNDAY CHRONICLE (Manchester) says—

..... an indispensable work of reference.

THE LIVERPOOL COURIER says—

All who are interested in things theatrical will welcome "Who's Who in the Theatre."

THE BIRMINGHAM GAZETTE AND EXPRESS says—

This comprehensive volume is a veritable encyclopaedia of the stage. "Who's Who in the Theatre" is a book no one interested in the stage can afford to do without.

THE BIRMINGHAM POST says—

..... this admirable volume..... We congratulate Mr. Parker warmly on the production of a book of reference which should have—and will have—a long and prosperous run.

THE SHEFFIELD INDEPENDENT says—

Mr. John Parker, a most reliable authority on matters connected with the stage, has discharged the duties of compiler and editor, and has spared no effort to make the volume an epitome of all matters relating to the theatre. We are surprised at its completeness.

THE YORKSHIRE OBSERVER says—

This monumental and indispensable work makes a welcome reappearance. Mr. Parker is to be congratulated upon the patience and the industry which he has shown in carrying through the necessary revision of dates and data, and in producing a storehouse of information invaluable to the Press, the profession, and the play-loving public.

THE YORKSHIRE POST says—

"Who's Who in the Theatre," edited by Mr. John Parker, is well established among standard reference books. Nowhere else can one find such full biographies of actors and actresses, with chronological lists of the plays in which they have appeared.

..... a reference book which was needed.

The best theatrical directory published. It supplies a want that has been increasingly felt in recent times. There is no other work of reference which can fill its place.

THE SHEFFIELD TELEGRAPH says—

Most acceptable to everybody concerned with the stage. Certain to be studied as well as merely consulted by playgoers.

The usefulness of the book is apparent even to the casual eye. The work is an excellent compilation, dealing with the theatrical world in a most comprehensive manner.

THE CARDIFF WESTERN MAIL says—

Not only does the work include full particulars of the careers of actresses and actors, but also the more notable managers, dramatists, composers, critics, scenic artists, historians, and biographers..... essential to every reference library.

"Who's Who in the Theatre" comes up once again, a perfect mine of information about everybody who is anybody on or about the stage. This is a very inclusive volume. The biographical section is wonderfully complete, including not only actors, but managers, dramatists, musical composers, critics, etc. Colonial, American, and Continental celebrities are included too, and the volume is not only an indispensable reference book, but is tremendously interesting for occasional reading.

THE EAST ANGLIAN DAILY TIMES says—

Here is a work which cannot easily be dispensed with by anyone interested in the Theatre of to-day.

DUBLIN EVENING HERALD says—

Invaluable to anyone who wishes to find out briefly and succinctly anything about anybody in connection with the theatrical profession.

EDINBURGH DISPATCH says—

The biographies are models of brevity and compression, and consequently, like Jaques, "full of matter." The inclusion of celebrities of the foreign stage is unusual in such publications, and in view of the comparative inaccessibility of the information, all the more valuable in this.

THE EDINBURGH EVENING NEWS says—

The editor, Mr. John Parker, has done his work thoroughly and well, and the result is a storehouse of information which is unique among theatrical reference books

THE SCOTSMAN says—

To those who have had occasion to use it in former years, "Who's Who in the Theatre" has approved itself as a most reliable book of reference in matters histrionic. In the edition which is now published, its editor, Mr. John Parker, has increased its usefulness in several ways.

The volume is an admirably compiled book of reference on all matters connected with the theatre at home and abroad. Full and accurate in its details, the volume should make a strong appeal to all interested in the theatre.

THE GLASGOW HERALD says—

Mr. John Parker, editor and compiler of "Who's Who in the Theatre," makes no vain claim when he describes the latest volume as the most comprehensive of its kind yet published. This will be found a valuable record to all interested in the theatre, and not least to Shakespearean students, who are furnished here with a unique chronology of the Shakespearean drama.

Some years ago Sir H. Beerbohm Tree described this work as "absolutely pyramidal" as a monument of industry. It is also, in everything connected with theatre and variety hall, a vast repository of business facts and of that personal information which is so attractive to all the human kind. It is a work of indispensable utility to all who are interested in any way in the stage. There is hardly any curiosity with regard to the theatre and theatre-folks, which may not be satisfied from its pages.

THE ABERDEEN FREE PRESS says—

.....it offers a mass of information that should render it an inseparable companion for reference purposes.

THE ABERDEEN JOURNAL says—

"Who's Who in the Theatre" is at once an invaluable biographical dictionary of theatrical people, and a mine of information relating to the stage.

HALIFAX EVENING COURIER says—

A revised edition of this remarkable storehouse of information regarding members of the theatrical profession is to hand. The volume is recognised generally as being one which cannot easily be dispensed with by anyone in the theatre of to-day.

IRISH INDEPENDENT says—

A veritable mine of information on all subjects relating to the stage. The book is handsomely produced, and is altogether indispensable as a reference volume for anyone connected with or interested in the stage.

THE WESTERN MORNING NEWS (Plymouth) says—

The Blue-book of the Theatre. A monument to its painstaking compiler and editor, Mr. John Parker. Compiler and publishers are alike to be congratulated on the contents and format of a volume which is indispensable to "the" profession.

JOHANNESBURG SUNDAY TIMES says—

With this book at hand no one need profess ignorance of the great army of world's actors and actresses.

The work has been edited by Mr. John Parker, well known in London theatrical circles, and he has done his work carefully and well. No one interested in the theatre of to-day can afford to be without "Who's Who in the Theatre," which is well bound, well printed, and is, in its way, unique.

This edition of "Who's Who in the Theatre" shows a very remarkable progress upon the previous issues of this valuable work of reference. It is much larger, much wider in scope, is fuller of information, and is the most complete work of theatrical reference yet issued by any British publishing house, and is an indispensable possession to any student of the contemporary drama, or to any playgoer.

TORONTO SATURDAY NIGHT says—

A credit both to the compiler and the publisher. People who pride themselves on knowing who is who theatrically cannot afford to be without this book.

MELBOURNE ARGUS says—

The volume is an epitome of all matters relating to the theatre.
